Changes in Healthcare Reimbursement

Healthcare delivery is beginning to transition from fee-for-service payments to value-based care models. This shift to value-based reimbursement flips the script on the traditional model of healthcare reimbursement, causing healthcare providers to change how they bill patients for care.

The COVID-19 pandemic was a pivotal time for our healthcare system. Our hospitals and health systems have become strained by unmatched levels of staffing shortages and rising inflation; however, these challenges provide an opportunity to transition toward a value-based care system.

The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) has been a major proponent for the move to value-based care. By 2030, CMS wants to align 100 percent of Medicare fee-for-service beneficiaries with an accountable care organization. CMS has also begun changing Medicare payments to reflect the shift to value-based care. The Biden administration finalized 2025 Medicare reimbursement rates for physicians and hospital clinics, with physicians seeing a 2.9 percent drop in their Medicare rates. Even with lower rates for physicians and hospitals, healthcare providers face challenges adapting to these new models that prioritize quality over quantity. The cuts in rates could make it harder for practices to cover expenses, buy new equipment and keep staff.

The Duval County Medical Society (DCMS) is an advocate for change to healthcare reimbursement. “Physician reimbursement in healthcare continues to be stuck in steady decline due to the inability of Congress to address widely recognized flaws in the Medicare Physician Fee Schedule. This decades-long failure to act has resulted in the value of physician services declining significantly over time and falling far below inflation. There are now more than 300 codes where Medicare reimbursement is less than the hard cost of rendering the service. The downward pressures are felt throughout care delivery as more physicians are acquired by health systems and corporations or replaced with non-physician practitioners,” said DCMS Executive Director Fraser Cobbe. “The DCMS continues to advocate for meaningful reform, joining our partners at the American Medical Association, calling on Congress to act immediately to preserve access to physician services for Medicare beneficiaries.”

Fee-for-Service vs. Value-Based Care

The most common insurance reimbursement type is fee-for-service. This is where healthcare providers are paid based on each service they perform, such as visits or medical tests, and payment is determined by the medical reimbursement rate. Providers are compensated regardless of the quality or outcome of the service. The main advantage for this type of model is that it ensures practitioners are paid for their time and hard work. On the other hand, this model can unfortunately lead to unnecessary medical services since providers earn more money when more services are offered.

In the value-based care model, providers are paid based on the value of care provided. There are three main types of value-based care: bundled payments, capitation and accountable care organizations.

The bundled payments method is a newer type of healthcare reimbursement in which providers are paid a fixed amount for a bundle of services provided for a specific episode of care based on the expected cost. Bundled payments also encourage medical providers to provide better care by working together. This method is often used for treatments that involve an array of healthcare services, such as surgery.

With the capitation method, healthcare providers receive a fixed amount of money for each patient they treat, rather than for individual services. This is to cover the anticipated cost of the healthcare services needed for the patient over a period of time. These payments are made in advance. Capitation is mostly used in managed care plans and incentivizes providers to use preventive care to avoid costly and unnecessary medical procedures. This can reduce healthcare costs in the long run. However, it can be difficult for medical practices to provide quality care while staying within a budget.

Accountable care organizations (ACOs) are groups of providers, such as hospitals or physicians, who work together to coordinate care of a specific group of patients, usually those who receive Medicare. These organizations are responsible for the quality and cost of that care. ACOs work to prevent unnecessary medical services and errors by making sure patients receive preventative care. ACOs also encourage providers to work collaboratively to improve outcomes.

The Challenges of Transitioning to Value-Based Care

There is a financial burden that comes with transitioning to value-based care. Healthcare providers need to invest in new technologies and infrastructure to support value-based models. Healthcare providers also need to use data analytics to measure and improve performance. By doing so, practices can optimize care delivery and focus on patient outcomes. By trying to work with these changes and employing effective strategies, healthcare providers can traverse the ever-changing reimbursement landscape and continue to provide the best care possible.

AI Applications in Medical Practice Management: How WhatsApp Business Can Help Your Practice

In today's digital age, more and more businesses are turning to artificial intelligence to help streamline operations. For medical practices, artificial intelligence applications can make a huge difference in time management for physicians and their staff members.

In partnership with several other medical societies, the Duval County Medical Society has released a 10-episode podcast series on free artificial intelligence applications in medical practice management called Free AI Applications in Medical Practice Management. In the podcast's fourth episode, Dr. Laura Kathryn Neal discusses WhatsApp Business, a free technology that medical practices can use to improve communication with patients. Dr. Neal is the National Dean of Colleges and Curriculum of Health Sciences at DeVry University.

According to Dr. Neal, practices can easily use WhatsApp Business to manage appointments, send reminders and address quick questions without much hassle, since many patients are already familiar with WhatsApp for personal or social uses. "The fact that it's free is a nice bonus, especially for smaller practices that need cost-effective solutions," said Dr. Neal.

Automated Messages

With WhatsApp Business, you can set up customized automated greeting messages tailored to your medical practice's specific marketing preferences. WhatsApp Business also allows you to respond to patients promptly even after your office is closed, fostering more communication and patient satisfaction. You can quickly reply to common questions and concerns, such as hours of operation, how to schedule an appointment and what insurance is accepted.

"The platform supports secure messaging with end-to-end encryption, so you can communicate safely about sensitive information. You can also share documents, images or videos—things like prescriptions, test results or health tips—to keep patients informed," said Dr. Neal.

You can also easily set up a business profile with important practice information such as your office address, website, business hours and even what services and treatments your practice offers.

Patient Communication

The app helps organize and label patient conversations for you so you can keep better track of communication with patients. WhatsApp Business can identify those who are contacting your practice for the first time and may need to be provided with more comprehensive information and assistance. The app can also help facilitate communication with patients after their appointments and prioritize urgent matters.

These efficient messaging features not only reduce the workload for your staff but also improve patient satisfaction. In today's digital age, we are accustomed to having instant access to information, and WhatsApp Business can provide that. These features help build trust and credibility with your patients and make them feel connected.

With WhatsApp Business you can make important announcements for your patients with broadcast lists. This allows you to make updates on any new medical providers, new treatments available and any special holiday hours. You can even send out appointment reminders, as well as health and wellness tips.

All the WhatsApp Business features are designed to save time for all medical practice staff members, including doctors, nurses, administrators and everyone in between.

How to Get WhatsApp Business

Getting the WhatsApp Business app is just as easy as downloading any other app. You can download it from whichever app store you use and easily set up your own personalized profile. For more information about WhatsApp Business, visit <https://business.whatsapp.com>.

To listen to the Free AI Applications in Medical Practice Management podcast series, visit the DCMS podcast webpage at www.dcmsonline.org/page/DCMSPodcasts. The first five episodes are available to the public, and the second half of the series is only accessible to DCMS members.

When your medical license is placed in retirement status, you are prohibited from practicing any form of medicine. However, if your license is converted to a limited license status, you can still practice medicine on a volunteer basis to provide uncompensated care for low-income residents. A limited license is restricted to areas of critical need. Since physicians are working without compensation under the limited license status, license renewal fees are waived.
